Roxbury, March 1, 1866.

My Dear Friend:

I have just returned from Washington, where I have had a very interesting visit. On the way, at New York, I got your kind letter, inviting me to lecture next week in Syracuse, and at Rochester, if arrangements can be made in the latter place. I have telegraphed you, to-day, that you may consider me pledged for a lecture at Syracuse on the evening of the 9th; and also at Rochester on the 8th, if that will answer. I am to speak in Auburn on the evening of the 7th. A line to me at Auburn will let me know what I am to do. I shall leave home on Tuesday.

Ever affectionately yours,
Wm. Lloyd Garrison.
